

4A Nigel Ng
Time capsule

Things that should be included in the time capsule

Time capsule is a tool that the people in the past created for keeping things that 'wait' to be discovered by the people in the future. It is like a gift to the people in the future. Therefore, the things that are kept in the capsule must have commemorative value that can surely help the people in the future study us. I suggest putting a letter from our principal, students' report cards and some medals or trophies that represent our best achievements.

Why should these items be included in the time capsule?

First of all, a letter from the principal can describe why and when the capsule is buried. It can give information about the visions and development of the school. Furthermore, it can be used to share some experience of being a principal to the future principals. The report cards and the medals or trophies are proofs of the description in the letter.

An item that represents me to be included in the time capsule

If there is an item that can represent me, it should be my student handbook. It has my personal information and different records. The completion of homework, quiz scores and overdue homework records can reflect my responsibility. From the timetable, others can find out which class I belonged to. Student handbook always follows a student, so it will be an item which represents me in the capsule.