Book Report – Matilda

I have recently read a book called Matilda. It is a story about a girl called Matilda who had special power. Matilda lived in a small village. She had read a variety of books written by different authors by the age of six. Later she was sent to school. There she met her class teacher, Miss Honey, and developed a bond with her. The headmistress, Miss Trunchbull maltreated her students with corporal punishment.

The most impressive part is when Matilda discovered her superpower. Without this twist, nothing exciting would happen next and there wouldn't be a happy ending.

My favourite character is, of course, Matilda. I am a person who loves fantasy. Even now, I still want to possess superpower. Although I know I can't act like Matilda, I still like her. This is not only related to her superpower, but also her wisdom, calmness and friendliness.

The character I hate most is Matilda's father – Mr Wormwood. He didn't care about his daughter from the bottom of his heart. He just bought the things he wanted and ignored her needs.

The theme of the story is about family, friendship and the bond between teacher and students. I think it is not interesting but suitable for teenage readers because those are the most important elements for them. Also, from this storybook, I learn that if you have a harmonious relationship with friends and family, you are likely to have a fulfilling life.

If I were Matilda, I would follow her actions. I wouldn't help my father to escape from the police. He deserved punishment for his dishonesty. I am happy that Matilda could live with Miss Honey, who has love and patience. I will recommend this book to my friends because it has a meaningful story. I hope that they enjoy it too.
