

Our most memorable teacher – Mrs Smith

The most memorable and impressive person in my life is my English teacher, Mrs Smith. She has been teaching in our school for 30 years.

Mrs Smith is of average height and she is a little bit fat. She always carries a broad smile on her face. With attractive brown curly hair over her shoulders, she has always drawn attention in our school. However, like many of her students, I prefer her kindness to her good look.

Whenever Mrs Smith walks around the school, our students greet her and show respect to her. Every year, lots of our students participated in the English activities not for interest, but for the popularity of Mrs Smith. It seems that Mrs Smith is a twinkling star in our students' heart.

Mrs Smith treats everyone fairly. We are like her children. When we get into trouble, she will forgive us if we say sorry sincerely to her. Additionally, Mrs. Smith is also our best friend. Once I was very upset about falling out with my friend. Mrs Smith saw me and asked what had happened to me. I felt her worry in her eyes, so I trusted her and told her the details of the incident. She gave me some advice patiently and gradually I got rid of my bad mood.

Mrs Smith is full of humour. You never get bored in her lessons. We learn about courage, confidence and lots of positive personality traits from her. So, she is worth being voted the most respectable teacher at school.

Mrs Smith teaches not only knowledge but also the spirit a man should have. By learning from her, I am not as aggressive as I was before. I really want to thank Mrs Smith – my most memorable teacher.
