Craze for K-pops

There are many reasons why I am in love with K-pop. The strict training process of trainee K-pop singers ensure that these future idols are well trained. They need to undergo years of training before debuting on the stage. The training usually takes 2 to 6 or more years, depending on the improvement made.

Another reason for the popularity of K-pop is related to those official fan clubs, which have a significant role in connecting the young artists and their fans. Although many fans are loyal to one k-pop band or artist, there are some fangirls and fanboys who have many K-pop idols that they like. They are called "multifandom fans". And I am one of them. In my opinion, being a k-pop multifandom fan who support many different groups and solo artists is better than okay. What do I mean? Loving and supporting more than one K-pop artists means I do respect everyone's opinion and I enjoy listening to tonnes of groups. I would consider myself a member of fandoms for about 10-20 of K-pop groups.

The first k-pop band I heard and liked was BTS. However, I am not a super-fan because I am a multifandom fan. My number one favourite group is, and will always be, the OT6 of Astro! These six hot beautiful members officially debuted on February 23, 2016. I have known Astro and loved them since 2017, and I hope to support them even further in the future. I've been a proud fan of them for 3 years, and one of the best parts of being their fan is growing up with them all along the way.
