This film is based on a book by Kevin Kwan of the same name. It is produced by SK Global Entertainment and it is directed by Jon M. Chu.

The film takes place in New York. It is about a couple named Nick Young and his girlfriend, Rachel Chu, who is an economics professor at New York University. They travel to Singapore for the wedding of his best friend, Collin, who is marrying Araminta Lee. Rachel visits her colleague friend, Peik Lin, who is shocked when she tells her that she is dating Nick Young. Peik reveals that Nick's family is extremely rich and famous, and are members of upper class.

At Araminta's bachelorette party, Rachel meets Amanda, Nick's former girlfriend, who hints to her that she may not be able to integrate into such a high class family with her lower background. Rachel finds her hotel room vandalized by the other girls who deem her a 'gold digger'. Their damaging action is confronted by Peik. When Nick attends a party, he reveals to Collin his plan to propose to Rachel. Collin expresses his concern about the trouble it will cause them, especially with Nick being expected to stay in Singapore and run his family's corporation and Rachel loving her job in New York, as well as the differences in their status.

The movie has many conflicts between Nick's former girlfriend and Rachel. But the couple always work it out in the end.

Crazy Rich Asians is a funny and amusing film with some moments that will touch your heart. I highly recommend it for people who like romance and funny dramas.
