Should cell phone be banned at school? This is a hot debate question among students, teachers and parents. Each party has their own opinion. In my opinion I totally disagree that cell phones should be banned at school.

Students have the freedom to use their phones at school. Many schools have the rule that students cannot use their phones. That makes students think it is a common thing we need to follow. Maybe that is dubious because we have human rights, that protect us from what we want to do, and there is no point schools should ban it. It is a freedom for us.

It may seem true that, in the eyes of the people who support cell phones are not good for us, cell phones affect our study. However, they never mention cell phone may offer good learning material to enhance learning among students. It can help us to study. With the advancement of technology, we can find out the answers of the question on cell phone immediately and there are useful resources like the e-learning apps. All of them are useful and convenient.

Many people argue that students may get addicted to smartphone. From another point of view, it is their choice to spend their time on cell phone, not the lesson. Their studies will deteriorate, for sure. And this result also can make them understand they cannot spend too much time on cell phones. They will change if they experience the problem. So why will student get addicted to smartphone?

To sum up, I think the cell phones bring benefits and we have the freedom to use it. The three points I mention above support cell phone should not be banned at school.
