Good people good deeds

One day, I took a walk in the street in the morning. The weather was cold. It made me feel like I was in a fridge. When I was walking to the bus stop, there were an elderly woman and a kid sitting on the bench. Suddenly, a man ran very fast and he grabbed the elderly woman's bag. The robber ran away as the woman shouted 'Oh! Help! There's been a robbery!' Then the robber was dashing towards me, so I caught him and snatched the bag back to the elderly woman.

The woman was thankful and a smile appeared on her face. She said, 'Thank you!'

After that, I saw a boy with a blue jacket with his little brother. His brother walked towards the road. At the same time, a car was fast approaching his brother. The boy with a blue jacket felt scared and he didn't know how to do. I pulled his brother out of the way. Fortunately, he didn't get hurt. My heart was pounding. They were overwhelmed with fear so I hugged them and patted their heads. I told them, 'That was very dangerous! You have to pay more attention to your brother and you can't walk in the road.' They nodded awkwardly and whispered 'Okay, sorry.'

After these two events of helping others, I felt happier than usual in my heart. I think if we do some good deeds and offer help, we will make people happy; and maybe someone will do good deeds for us too when we need help or encounter some problems. Most importantly, we should always help others without expecting anything in return.
